➤ Critical Texts of Cankam Literature

Back in May 2006, in the 21st issue of this newsletter, we announced an EFEO project to try to ensure the survival of “The last witnesses of Tamil Cankam poetry”. Across South Asia, the copying of manuscripts has ceased and the papers and palm-leaves to which this extraordinary body of powerfully evocative ancient poetry has been committed are now, as we observed in 2006, submitting to the ineluctable ravages of time.

We also observed that this literature, although published in learned editions, has never been critically edited: in other words, many variant readings have not been published, and such variants as appear in footnotes have generally not been ascribed to the sources that transmit them. What this means is that even the recent transmission history has not been recorded, a history which can provide vital clues for constituting and interpreting these remarkable texts.

We can now report that there has been considerable progress: we have been able to gather digital images of manuscripts from South Indian libraries, notably the U. Ve. Saminatha Library in Chennai, and we have begun the ambitious task of producing editions that are based on the whole range of available evidence, that lay open their sources and that discuss the rationale of their choices. These editions are appearing in a series of co-publications, “Critical Texts of Cankam Literature”, undertaken by the Pondicherry Centre of the French School of Asian Studies (EFEO) and the Tamilmann Patippakam. The series aims at furnishing critical editions prepared by an international team of scholars. In these editions, each poem is printed with an apparatus recording the variants of all surviving manuscripts and of the hundreds of quotations found in grammatical literature. A complete annotated English translation is furnished, the purpose of which is not to offer a polished version that brushes over the awkwardnesses, but rather a tool that lays open difficulties of interpretation. Each edition will also contain a complete glossary with morphological analysis and translation, as well as a number of special indexes pertaining to Indo-Aryan loanwords, complex verb-forms, sources of quotations and the like. One edition has appeared in 2008, and a second is now in press:

- Narriṇai, ed. by E. Wilden (3 volumes, 2008)
- Kuṟuntokai, ed. by E. Wilden (3 volumes; 2010)

Work is currently in progress on the following texts

- Aiṅkuṟunūru, ed. by Th. Lehmann (3 volumes)
- Kalittokai, ed. by T. Rajeswari (2 volumes)
- Akanānūru, ed. by J.-L. Chevillard and E. Wilden (7 volumes)
- Mullaippāṭṭu, ed. by S. Ebeling (1 volume)
- uranānūru, ed. by G. Vijayavenugopal (5 volumes)

FOCUS

➤ The Urban Workshop series

The Urban Dynamics division of the CSH, in collaboration with the Centre for Policy Research (CPR), Delhi, has launched an Urban Workshop Series. These workshops, held on the last Tuesday of every month, seek to elicit public discussion on issues related to the development of the city and try to address all its facets including its administration, culture, economy, society, and politics.

The first three sessions were held on 23 February, 30 March and 27 April. In the first one, entitled “Muslims in the City: the Case of Bhopal”, Prof. Christophe Jaffrelot explored the degree of intermingling as far as the religious communities are concerned. The case of Bhopal is interesting because it is one of the oldest ‘Muslim cities’ and still comprises a large Muslim population. The presentation addressed issues related to the current status of the political representation of Muslims in Bhopal, the relation between the walled city and the rest of the locality and the assessment of the emergence of a new Muslim elite.

In the second workshop “Towards new Poverty Lines for India”, Dr. Himanshu presented the results of his research undertaken as part of the Planning Commission’s Expert Group to Review the Methodology for Estimation of Poverty to draw up new poverty lines. He presented new poverty estimates based on the National Sample Survey consumption data. It recalculates new state-wise urban and rural poverty lines that reflect spatial variations in the cost of living in 2004-05. The estimates reveal much larger rural-urban differences but less concentration of either rural or urban poverty in a few states.

In the third session “Reading ‘Mumbai’s Transformation Project’ through the lens of Infrastructure Reforms” Dr. Marie-Hélène Zérah aimed at understanding how large city-regions are governed, by focusing on the role of institutions in the management of large urban technical networks. It focused on the new instruments of public action and their outcomes and asked whether changes in governance of technical networks are able to balance imperatives of economic performance and extension of services to all. It also looked at how infrastructure reforms form a part of an urban regime and sought to understand the unintended consequences of public policy in terms of shifting power relationships in the city.

➤ Catch-up and Convergence in Indian Manufacturing and Agricultural Sectors

Greater participation of the state government in the regional growth process is a common feature in the Indian economy in the post-liberalisation era. Consequently, factors like regional infra-structural facilities, differences in the natural raw-material endowment, political climate and a host of other factors have a far-reaching impact on the growth of the manufacturing and the agricultural sectors across the regions. In this context, this study proposes to examine: (a) growth and productivity of the manufacturing and the agricultural sectors at the regional level and the factors that explain differences in the same; and (b) the various forms of inter-linkages with the formal and informal manufacturing and the agricultural sectors at different regional levels.

The manufacturing (formal and informal) and the agricultural sectors have been selected for the study for the following reasons. First, it is noticed that in spite of the potential of the manufacturing sector to absorb unskilled labour, its share in the total output (20.8%) is surprisingly small compared to the service sector (51.4%) indicating low productivity. Further, the agricultural sector also plays a vital role in propelling the growth of the economy because of its linkage effects with other sectors of the economy.

While examining growth and productivity, the study will employ the frontier approach to productivity analysis that constructs a technological frontier by taking into consideration the input-output set of best performing production units and decomposes the productivity into efficiency and technical change.

➤ Building Homes and Neighbourly Spaces: Delhi 1947-2006

This postdoctoral project is an attempt to inscribe processes of place-making into histories of post-Independence Delhi. It is framed as a social history of one neighbourhood and will attempt to trace its metamorphoses from an outlying suburban village, to a colonial and post-Partition resettlement site and more recently to a ‘globalising’ cityscape in order to understand how space has come to be historically configured in post-Independence Indian metropolitan cities and to elucidate from this, the shifting semiotic landscape of everyday processes of urban self-fashioning.

The project is conceived as a response to the fact that large parts of the existing literature on Indian cities of this period remain largely dominated by a single set of representations common to third world cities which have largely been read as 1) agents of modernisation, and 2) their corollary – incapable of achieving ‘modernness’, as defined in relation to the West read here not as a geographic space, but in the words of Ashis Nandy, as a psychological one. There is a space and a tension, however, between the trope of lacking that which is potentially possible and the continual, historical morphing of the landscape. In other words, even as it is dismissed as a failure, the landscape is, and has been, continually transformed at the intersection of the nation, economy, polity and the lives of those who inhabit it. It is these histories that the project hopes to bring to light through one Delhi neighbourhood.

Given the absence of a localised archive in the city for this timeframe, methodologically the project requires the creation and collation of a body of usable data. The project design is centred on oral histories with multigenerational families, but also includes architectural documentation, qualitative surveys of religious and cultural institutions, oral histories with local politicians, archival research on government urban, land and municipal policies, as well as a survey of secondary scholarly, journalistic and fictional sources to build both 'global' and 'local' milieus for the urbanisation of Delhi in the post-Independence period.

➤ India's Afghan policy since 1947

The project is part of a doctoral research at the Sciences Po and deals with India's Afghan policy since 1947. This study intends to assess the extent to which the Pakistan (and Kashmir) factor plays a role in the Indo-Afghan relations since Partition, and hopes to bring to light the various forms this relationship has taken in course of time, depending on shifts in India's foreign policy and orientations. Indeed, India's dealing with post-communist Afghanistan is an example of the inadequacies of India's diplomacy which seeks since the beginning of the 1990s to adapt itself to the needs of market economy while maintaining the implementation of national security related measures when it comes to dealing with its neighborhood.

The Afghanistan case is of great importance for New Delhi's regional calculi but also for its global ambitions since the NATO intervention following the fall of the Taliban regime in 2001. In this process, this work will also try to establish the nature and extent of the links between New Delhi's dual management of the Pashtunistan and Kashmir issues which have been the major obstacles for South Asian regional integration and stability.

The SEZ Book Preparation Workshop.

The final workshop of the research collective on "The Politics of India's Special Economic Zones" was held on 10-12 January at the Centre for Policy Research (CPR) in Delhi. The aim of the workshop was to prepare the final edited book, and participants presented first drafts of their chapters. Presentations included studies on Karnataka (Anjali Mody), Tamil Nadu (M. Vijayabaskar) West Bengal and Orissa (Partha Sarathi Banerjee), Punjab and Gujarat (Manshi Asher), Maharashtra (Rohit Mujumdar, Anirudh Paul), Uttar Pradesh (Sudha Pai, Avinash Mishra) and an assessment of overall urban aspects (N. Sridharan). The book manuscript is expected to be ready by June, marking the conclusion of this two-year project. Among other outputs, a Briefing Note is available on the project website:

<http://www.indiasezpolitics.org/>

This project is coordinated by the CSH (Loraine Kennedy), in collaboration with the CPR (Partha Mukhopadhyay) and Hunter College, City University of New York (Rob Jenkins), with support from the Ford Foundation, Delhi.

Lecture by Dr. Bertrand Geay and Dr. Jérôme Camus (Université de Picardie – CURAPP/CSE) on The Student Movement as a Total Social Fact. About the 2006 Mobilisation in France at the CSH on 12 February 2010.

International conference on Housing of the poor, social exclusion and urban/ environmental policies in metropolises of India and Brazil: Some Parisian comparisons held on 1 February at the University of Nanterre and on 2 & 3 February at the Musée du Quai Branly.

As in Mumbai and Delhi, so in Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, economic restructuring has sharpened social and spatial disparities: an acute problem of housing, an astonishing rise in precarious housing settlements (Indian slums and Brazilian favelas), rapid peri-urbanisation, and environmental threats to neighbouring forests. Housing, rehabilitation or conservation schemes are constantly being framed to respond to this challenge. Such schemes are the object of study of the SETUP project funded by the Agence Nationale de Recherche (ANR) (<http://setup.csh-delhi.com>).

This international conference provided the opportunity to situate in a more generalised comparative framework the results of research conducted as part of the SETUP project. In fact, the problem of precarious housing settlements, that had become acute in the decades of 1960s and '70s, has resurfaced. Slums either continue to exist or resurface, the large set-ups are in crisis, part of the population still find it difficult to find accommodation – developments that call for a reappraisal of social housing policy to make it more accountable. Has there been a transformation in the modes of social exclusion? Do we see new contestations arising between spaces (centre/periphery) and between sectors (housing/"natural" resources)? To what extent do the Central Government, the municipalities or the regions play a role in an already globalised yet decentralised urban world? How to reconcile social measures facilitating housing for the most vulnerable, with environmental measures, meant to protect biodiversity? These were some of the questions debated over by scholars and social activists from Brazil, India and France.

Exhibition on Gateway to a new world: the Lazaret at La Grande Chaloupe, Reunion Island at the IFP from 22 January to 2 May 2010.

Lecture by Dr. Niklas Thode JENSEN, on Science between Mission, Commerce and Tamil Society: The doctor of the Danish-Halle Mission in Tranquebar, ca. 1730-1766 – at the University of Pondicherry on 25 January 2010. Joint seminar organised by the Social Sciences Departments of the IFP and the Pondicherry University.

Lecture by Prof. Peter SCHARF on Preserving knowledge through media transitions: Ushering the heritage of India into the digital age, at the IFP on 2 February 2010.

Lecture by Dr. Vijayalaxmi KINHAL on Secondary succession on the Coromandel Coast of south India, at the IFP on 5 February 2010.

International seminar on Pharmasud Workshop #1 – Pharmaceutical Innovations in the Ayurvedic Industry at the IFP on 9-10 February 2010.

This workshop was organised in the framework of the project Local knowledge, market construction and globalization: two regimes of pharmaceutical innovation in the South (Pharmasud), funded by the French National Agency for Research (ANR), and jointly led by the IFP, and the CERMES in Paris. It explores new systems of production, mobilisation and transfer of knowledge, related to the invention of drugs in two countries considered to play a growing role in the pharmaceutical economy, and more broadly in the world economic regulation, namely India and Brazil. The meeting in Pondicherry concerned the Ayurvedic industry and its involvement on knowledge production and therapeutic innovation in response to global constraints.

Lecture by Dr. Jean-Paul LANLY on Deforestation and forest degradation factors, at the IFP on 23 February 2010.

International seminar on Indian Manuscripts and their Preservation: Strategies for Conservation, Diffusion and awareness at the IFP on 25-26 February 2010.

Until the beginning of the 20th century, South Asian literary culture was mainly transmitted through handwritten documents. Though “print-culture” was adopted, the majority of pre-modern South Asian literature on many subjects survives as manuscripts. And the copying of ancient writings by hand has now virtually ceased.

This two-day workshop aimed at promoting an awareness about the importance of conserving the handwritten heritage of Asia and providing a forum for the exchange of ideas on its conservation.

There were papers on manuscript tradition in Asian society, presentations by experts on technical aspects of conservation (with particular relevance to palm-leaf manuscripts), a demonstration of how palm-leaves are prepared and inscribed in South India, presentations on the state of progress of large-scale cataloguing and digitising projects. For school pupils and the general public, there was a small exhibition of the manuscript collections housed at the French Institute, Pondicherry.

Emmanuel FRANCIS (University of Louvain-la-Neuve) came to the Pondicherry Centre from 15 April to 15 May to pursue his studies on the eulogies of the Cola dynasty.

Maria PIERA CANDOTTI (EPHE and Lausanne) and her colleague, Tiziana PONTILLO (University of Cagliari), came to the Pondicherry EFEO Center for a period of two weeks beginning January 10 to study the concept of lopa (omission) and its evolution in the Sanskrit grammatical tradition with Pandit S. L. P. Anjaneya Sarma (EFEO).

Wiesek MICAL, doctoral student at the University of Hamburg, visited Pondicherry to continue his study of the goddess Kurukulla in the Buddhist and Shaiva tantric traditions.

Alex WATSON returned in January as an EFEO scholarship holder to work with Dominic Goodall and S. L. P. Anjaneya Sarma on their joint project on rival notions of salvation as presented in a tenth century Sanskrit treatise by the Kashmiri theologian Ramakantha, the Paramoksanirasakarikavrtti ("Commentary on the verses rejecting others' views of liberation").

Dr. Eva WILDEN (EFEO, on leave at the University of Hamburg) visited the Pondicherry Center for a period of one month, beginning on 7 February.

Dr. Timothy LUBIN of Washington and Lee University came regularly to the Pondicherry Centre for short stays to join the Shaiva reading group.

Luther OBROCK, a doctoral student at the University of California at Berkeley, was in Pondicherry from January to April to pursue his studies at the Pondicherry Center, partly by taking part in the Shaiva reading group and by working with Dr. F. Grimal and Dr. S.L.P. Anjaneya Sarma.

Anne DAVRINCHE, student at the École du Louvre, returned to Pondicherry Center during February and March in order to complete an inventory of the art objects belonging to the EFEO, which she started in 2009.

Dr. Fabrizia BALDISSERA (Florence University) and Dr. Whitney COX

(SOAS) came to the Pondicherry Center in February to take part in the Shaiva reading group.

Charlotte SCHMID (EFEO) will be visiting the Pondicherry Centre during February and March to work on the epigraphic and iconographic collections at three Chola temples.

Dr. Alexander STOLYAROV, Senior Research Scholar of the Institute of Oriental Studies of the Russian Academy of Sciences and specialist in medieval Indian copper-plate inscriptions, visited the Centre for a period of two months beginning 1 March.

Professor Sumathi RAMASWAMY of the University of Michigan, Professor Rich FREEMAN of Duke University, and Dr. Kengo HARIMOTO of the University of Hamburg visited the Pondicherry Centre for a few days beginning 27 February.

Nigamajnanadesikaviracitah Sivajnanabodhopanyasah

Critically edited with translation in English, notes and bibliography by T. Ganesan, Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan, New Delhi, 2009, xxi, p. 74.

Language: Sanskrit, English.

Sivajnanabodha is one of the shortest ever philosophical texts that gives the essence of the Saiva religio-philosophical system. This text had, in fact, inaugurated a new movement within the tradition of the Saivasiddhanta in South India. In fact, for nearly eight centuries the entire development of Saivasiddhanta was based on this text through commentaries and sub-commentaries whereby the Sivajnanabodha has become the fundamental text.

The unpublished commentary called Upanyasa was composed by Nigamajnanadesika (Nigamajnana II) on the Sivajnanabodha. Nigamajnanadesika who lived in the 16th century CE comes in the tradition of great Saivasiddhanta preceptors who are authors of many works in Sanskrit as well as in Tamil. Though most of his works are in Sanskrit they always aim to present and elaborate the important teachings proper to the Saivasiddhanta tradition that developed in the Tamil country. There are some original views on a few of the important concepts which Nigamajnana II states clearly and argues well for their establishment in the Sivajnanabodhopanyasa. The text is generally lucid, direct and gives the basic teachings in a clear way.

Ayurvedic Manufacturing Industry in Kerala: Growth and Linkages of a Traditional Knowledge Sector

Harilal Madhavan, VDM Verlag Dr. Müller, 2010, 156 p.

*Language : English. 81.00 USD
ISBN-10: 3639245555. ISBN-13: 978-*

3639245554

This book explores the growth and prospects of Ayurvedic manufacturing in Kerala and outlines the structure, raw material source and linkages of its organised segment.

Using the primary firm-level information, this work unpacks the linkages between the industry and the medicinal plants and health tourism sectors in the state, which could be worked out through a cluster promotion strategy within the state development paradigm. Two manufacturing firms are explored in detail to understand whether the sector would be sustainable or not, and the result seems to be positive. This book provides the ground from which to examine the commercialisation and transnationalisation of Ayurvedic medicine. It fills an important gap in the literature on healthcare in Kerala and offers an insightful economic argument in current anthropological debates.

La geste de Rama : poème à double sens de Sandhyakaranandin (Introduction, texte, traduction, analyses)

Sylvain Brocquet, Collection Indologie n°110, IFP / EFEO, 2010, vii, 523 p.

*Language: French. 1000 (43 €)
ISBN (IFP): 978-81-8470-174-6. ISBN (EFEO): 978-2-85539-676-7*

The Ramacaritam by Sandhyakaranandin, a narrative poem of 215 stanzas (of which 195 survive), is a perfect example of poetry with two meanings: by constant use of śleṣa, it contrives to summarise the plot of the Ramayana and to relate the recovery of Eastern Bengal, during the eleventh century AD, by Ramapala, a ruler of the Pala dynasty. The last chapter extends beyond the martial story and deals with the succession of the epic hero and of the historical king. Some thirty stanzas add a third meaning, of theological character, to the two main ones.

This book provides the transliterated Sanskrit text (the transliteration is duplicated to reveal the different morphological analyses), a separate translation of each meaning, and a close analysis of polysemous sequences. An introduction sheds light on the literary and historical context on the one hand, on the linguistic and rhetorical devices which generate polysemy on the other hand. The book is complemented with several appendices containing: another famous literary example of double entendre, a list of known inscriptions issued by the rulers who are referred to in the poem, and the text and the translation of one of the main epigraphs. Two indices record all the polysemous words and all those of historical or geographical purport.

Le crâne et le glaive. Représentations de Bhairava en Inde du Sud (VIIIe-XIIIe siècles)

Karine Ladrech, Collection Indologie n°112, IFP / EFEO, 2010, 467 p.+ CD-ROM

Language: French. 1000 (43 €)
ISBN (IFP): 978-81-8470-178-4. ISBN (EFEO): 978-285539-102-1

The present work is devoted to Bhairava, a fierce form of the Hindu god Śiva, and focuses on the ways in which he is represented in South Indian sculpture from the 8th to the 13th century AD. This complex and ubiquitous figure, transgressive and yet at the same time a source of salvation, was accorded an exceptional importance in the religion and art of medieval India. This study brings to the fore his so far underestimated popularity in South India. Bhairava's exceptionally rich and varied iconography has been examined in the light of both mythological literature (mainly the Puranas) and normative treatises (śilpasastra, agama/tantra, collections of dhyanaslokas, etc.). In the course of the book, the author attempts to unveil what this deity meant for those who sculpted, contemplated and worshipped his carved representations.

This volume presents, in the form of a dictionary, the examples of conjugated verbal forms given by Bhattoji Diksita in his Siddhantakaumudi in the chapters in which he deals with the causative, the desiderative, the intensive, the denominative, the possible combinations of these conjugations, the middle voice, the active voice, the impersonal, the passive and the reflexive. To these examples, numbering one thousand four hundred and forty-nine, sixty-eight are added, borrowed from the Mahabhasya, the Kasikavrtti, and the Bhasavrtti. Each example constitutes the entry of an article providing, amongst other things, its complete derivation along with notes. Examples may also be accessed through six indexes: index of the sutra-s to which the examples are attached; index of the vartika-s and the ganasutra-s referred to in the articles; index of the roots on which the examples are formed; index of technical terms associated with the categories of conjugated verbal forms dealt with in this volume; index of examples by chapter of the Siddhantakaumudi; index of examples classified by tense and mood.
